Friday 1st March

Dear Parents and Carers,

You are probably aware of a recent social media challenge targeting children and young adults that is gaining a lot of attention in the news due to its disturbing nature.

NSPCC advice for schools is for schools and parents/carers to remind children about the need to stay safe online particularly as the images associated with it are frightening for children. We wanted to reassure you that we have always discussed online safety with the children and how if they ever come across an image or content that worries them, they must talk to an adult. We would be grateful if you could also discuss this at home.

If you are interested in knowing how to set up parental controls the link below will give you more information. There are also plenty of links on our website in the curriculum-computing section that will help you to support your child at home.
